Titanium Damascus (also called Timascus) and Zircuti are innovative materials, Titanium Damascus and Zircuti are similar to Damascus steel. Damascus steel is forged from two or more steels. Titanium Damascus is composed of two or more titanium alloys (generally CP and 6AL4V at present), Zircuti is made from a forged rod containing Zirconium and three different Titanium Alloys. Timascus and Zircuti are corrosion resistant, non-magnetic and light in texture. They have the beautiful pattern and appearance of Damascus steel and does not have the disadvantages of steel. They are made by placing different titanium alloys in a metal box, filling them with inert gas and applying heat and pressure to forge the two alloys to be laminated together. At present, the coloring treatment of timascus and zircuti usually uses heating to change the color, rather than anodizing. Of course, all current safe coloring technologies can be applied to Timascus and Zircuti. In the future, different alloy combinations of steel will have different colors. The irregular pattern of Timascus and Zircuti, and the principle of discoloration under high heat give Timascus and Zircuti the beauty of multiple colors. Timascus and Zircuti are currently widely used to embellish knives, rings, necklaces, pendants and other accessories.

The Timascus ring and Zircuti Ring are sturdy, beautiful in color, and each one has a unique texture. Irregularly cut surface, elegant and rough, full of mystery. The Timascus and Zircuti texture do not fade, and a thin oxide layer will form on the surface as time goes by, the surface will be dim but the texture will remain the same. It can also be re-polished for a new look. Timascus and Zircuti are hypoallergenic and will not react uncomfortably to the skin, nor does it stain the skin like gold, silver, and copper.
